Protect your horse from hazards on the farm

Safety tips from Equine Guelph, the horse owners' and care givers' center at the University of Guelph

Horse owners often feel their beloved equines are simply a magnet for injuries. Being accident prone just seems to be in their nature, most times brought on by their instinctive fight-or-flight response, their need to establish herd hierarchy, and in some cases, their sense of natural curiosity.

By spending time to minimize the various hazards found on your property through identification and removal, you'll take one step closer to making your barn and property safer for your horse and eliminate any potential accidents that may occur.

"There is no such thing as an accident, they are only incidents," says Dr. Rebecca Gimenez, primary instructor and president of Technical Large Animal Emergency Rescue, Inc. (TLAER), based in Georgia. "No matter how unfortunate the situation, looking back, something somewhere probably could have prevented it from happening in the first place."

Gimenez provides training in technical animal-rescue techniques, procedures, and methodologies across the U.S. and internationally. In addition to publishing numerous critiques, articles, and journal submissions on horse safety, technical large animal rescue and horse-handling issues, she published her first book, Technical Large Animal Emergency Rescue, in 2008.

She recommends that horse and facility owners become educated in both prevention and safety in order to identify any possible hazards and take the appropriate action beforehand to help offset an emergency visit from your veterinarian or even worse, having to resort to calling 911.

"The issue is usually having enough knowledge to understand where these hazardous problems lie and to act on them," says Gimenez.

Hazards on the farm

Farm properties can commonly become a catch-all for clutter and various safety hazards. Make it a habit to walk the property and be on the lookout for anything that could pose a problem should a horse connect with it. Keep an eye out for any sharp edges or protruding items such as nails, screws, torn metal, etc. Farm and maintenance equipment such as mowers, bailers, and harrows should all be stored away in their proper places. Take the necessary steps to dispose of any clutter or debris that has been collecting along fence lines, in lanes, or around the barn.

Walk your pastures and fill in any holes to prevent torn ligaments or a broken leg, and collect any discarded round-bale netting or binder twine -- it's surprising how some horses like to munch on these things. Also keep a look out for any potentially poisonous or toxic plants, such as tansy ragwort, nightshade, cocklebur, etc. While your horse may have not bothered with these in the past, a hungry horse without adequate pasture or hay will eat anything. Inspect not only your grazing field, but your hay as well. For a list of dangerous plants in your area, check with your local agriculture department. If you are unable to tackle any of the potential hazards immediately, make note of your findings so that you don't forget about them. For a complete list of identifying hazards on the farm, visit the Equine Guelph website.

Hidden hazards

Dust, fumes, and vapors are hidden hazards that can have long-term effects on respiratory health for both horses and the humans who work around them. Poor ventilation can contribute to allergies and respiratory ailments including recurrent airway obstruction (RAO), better known as heaves.

"We've all been in barns during the winter where all the doors and windows are closed up tight because of the cold," notes Gimenez. "And this comes down to human comfort. We're cold, so we think the horses are cold and close everything up. Without proper ventilation, the horses breathe in all that dust and ammonia. This is an unseen hazard that a lot of people don't think about."

A properly ventilated barn encourages correct airflow movement that expels stale air and pushes chemical odors, such as ammonia, out of the barn and allows fresh air to enter.

"I've seen people spend $100,000 on a new barn and put in cheap $10 box fans, which are also a huge fire hazard," continues Gimenez.

"Why didn't they spend a bit extra and install overhead fans? Or bring in a ventilation expert to look at their place and evaluate a proper ventilation system that can release the fumes and help improve the air quality in that barn?"

High-risk factors

Statistics show that the two most common emergencies affecting horse owners are trailer wrecks and barn fires, notes Gimenez. These are followed by entrapment-type emergency situations where the horse is stuck in mud or icy water, tangled in a fence, or other around-the-farm situations where horses become trapped and cannot remove themselves.

While a necessity, fencing is also a major contributor to hazards on the farm, and you should inspect these as part of your daily routine. Don't forget to check BOTH sides of your fencing and look for any protruding nails or wire, rotting posts, loose boards, dropped gates, etc.

"Make a habit of checking your fences regularly," says Gimenez. "Not only can your horses injure themselves on broken boards or wires, but it only takes a stiff wind or the snow being so deep that the horses can just step over them, and then they're loose. And a panicky, loose horse on the run can then open up a whole new set of emergency situations."

Another danger that Gimenez warns of is housing horses in fields with ponds during the winter. If you are not able to relocate them to another area of the property, ensure that ponds are fenced off with some form of temporary fencing before they freeze over. There have been numerous incidents where a horse will walk out across a snow-covered pond and fall through the ice into freezing water. Sometimes it doesn't end well.

"Last December, the Emergency Equine Response Unit in the Kansas City area had the horrifically tragic and difficult job of retrieving the bodies of three young horses out of a pond after they fell through the ice and drowned," she says. "I can't stress it enough: people have to fence off their ponds and keep their horses out of mud, ice and water."

Don't fall victim to "It won't happen to me" syndrome

Accidents involving horses can happen anywhere, at any time, and it's an unfortunate fact that many could have been prevented. By taking the time to identify and correct any hazards that may be found on your property, you'll be in a better position to prevent any possible injuries that can arise. This saves aggravation on not only your horses, but also your pocketbook.

"Take the time to educate yourself on accident prevention and maintain your facilities so as to minimize injury to your horses," says Gimenez. "They will thank you for it."

Favorite class of the day?

DIRTY HARNESS DAY 2014

The day dawned foggy, but cleared up for the first four classes on Saturday, August 23rd at the Fox valley Saddle Assn. grounds in Hampshire, IL. HUB Club members and non members brought their horses and ponies for a fun day of driving.

On Friday, Al & Kris Breyer, Leslye Sandberg, Reiner & Lonnie Schuetz, Dr. Lydia Grey, Mary Thompson and Renee Enright helped set the Cross Country and Fault & Out classes. Jim Feuerborn had the grounds beautifully mowed for us.

Dr. Ann McCombs judged the Super Reinsmanship, Precision Driving and Games classes aided by Leslye Sandberg and Dr. Lydia Grey. Mary Ann Carter with the help of Teri Delke handled the Cross Country Course.

One competitor had this to say about the day: "Hi Everyone,

I'm the "new kid on the block", and I want to thank you all for your hospitality and cheerful attitudes !!! My Husband and I had a great time, and I think my pony did too.

So sorry the rain make the afternoon difficult for those of you that stayed.

I most enjoyed the opportunity to drive Super Reinsmanship and Precision driving, and of course the Cross Country was so much fun. There just aren't any competitions that offer those classes. I'm a bit too far away to join your club, but schedule permitting, I will be back !!!! And hope to bring a few more entries with me.

Thanks! JOANN WILLIAMS AND CF LADYSMITH "

Joann, We are very glad you came and had a great time.....Elkhorn is not that far. We have a number of HUB Club members near you....and thank you for bringing C.F. Ladysmith, our Reserve Champion Pony!!!! You could attend the September 20 the meeting in Wauconda,IL. and pickup your ribbon. at my house. We devised the DHD to be affordable, fun and have classes that do not require the driver to have a groom on board. KRIS BREYER

A volunteer (who showed last year) said:" It's almost as much fun watching as driving." TERRI DELKE

LOVED, LOVED, LOVED THE RIBBONS KRIS PICKED OUT, WITH THEIR POLKA DOTS AND WHAT-NOT.

Unfortunately, the rains came down in buckets after lunch, making us bring the last four classes into the indoor arena. Three pony turnouts stayed for the games classes. Still, they all loved the Rainbow Cones Class and had ideas to change how to drive it for next year.

Trainer tips from Stafford Carriage Driving

Do your hands some tingle or arms hurt or go numb while driving? Be sure that you are holding the reins mainly with your thumb and pointer finger. The rest of your fingers should be soft allowing for less tension in your arms, wrists and hands. This also allows for a more productive half halt. If your horse is too strong to hold the reins with your thumb and pointer finger then the horse is too strong(or you are) If that is not the issue try going with a wider width rein or thickness, this allows your hand to rest on the rein rather than gripping the rein. You can also trying a rein with gripping stops or a bit of nylon / rubber woven in.

Tip of the day:

Train cones exercises once or twice a week. This is beneficial for horse and driver of any skill level. Be sure to set and measure the cones at your (or your horses) current level or the level above. Put balls on the cones! This holds you and your equine accountable for subtle mistakes making for a more productive training session. The exercises are about quality, not quantity.
